Aurora Historical Society

Aurora, Colorado

Embrace your city and its history

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

January/February 2026

Dear Aurora Historical Society Members,

We have scheduled an outstanding program for our regular meeting on January 27. Our own Keith Outcalt, the AHS Vice President, will regale us with a hard-to-believe story about Aurora's Science Fiction Land, the wildest theme park that never was. Had this project come to fruition, it supposedly would have rivalled Disneyland in its glamour and glitter, in an area of the city now dominated by fulfillment centers and large residential developments. One wonders how different Aurora might be with its Science Fiction Land. Residents of Anaheim, California might also wonder how different their community would have been if Disneyland had never been built. See below for more details about the January program and later programs.

I wrote in the last newsletter about the purpose of a local historical society. It is an organization that is devoted to collecting, preserving, interpreting, and promoting the history of a particular place, in this case, Aurora, Colorado. It is founded and it survives because of people like you, who cherish the place in which they live and work and who want to know more about its history and the people who were responsible for making the place that it is today. We are titillated by the stories of grand plans that were never fulfilled (like Science Fiction Land) and want to know more about these misadventures – and the successes!

My sincere and humble thanks to those of you who support the Aurora Historical Society. I look forward to meeting and talking with you at any of our upcoming meetings or on one of the tours of local historic sites, which we are planning to kick off in 2026. Please do not hesitate to contact me at any time with questions, comments, or suggestions.

Sincerely,
Gordy Tucker
President

Victory Grange: A Community's Heartbeat on the High Plains

The story of Aurora's Victory Grange begins long before its doors opened on Tower Road. In 1867, the National Grange movement was founded to bring farm families together for education, cooperation, fellowship, and civic action to combat steep railroad freight rates, high interest bank loans, and the isolation of farm families. The movement spread quickly across the country, and by 1874—two years before statehood—Colorado farmers had already organized the Colorado State Grange.

NATIONAL GRANGE MASTER Newsom (left) of Washington D.C. was among the several hundred persons that thronged the Victory Grange Hall dedication last Saturday night. Mr. Newsom delivered the main address of the evening. Others shown with Mr. Newsom include Mayor C. E. Tupps, mayor of Aurora and member of the executive board of the Victory Grange; Max Maul, Victory Grange master; and Lee R. Prichard, state master. Advocate Photo

Aurora's Victory Grange, established in 1939, grew directly from the grange movement. The families who founded it lived on the open plains east of Denver, where wartime pressures and geographic distance made community life difficult. They began raising funds during World War II, determined to build a gathering place that would strengthen local ties. Their efforts culminated in 1951 with the opening of the Victory Grange Hall.

From the start, Victory Grange became a major part of the civic infrastructure for rural Arapahoe County. The hall hosted meetings, celebrations, agricultural programs, and lively social events that brought together farm families and residents from the growing town of Aurora. In 1951, the Grange's popular Dinner Dances—just $2.00 per person for an evening of food and music—filled the hall with laughter and helped knit together a community in transition.

That same year, Victory Grange hosted one of its most memorable events: the Aurora Fireman's Annual Banquet. The City Council, city employees, and their spouses gathered for a meal prepared by the ladies of the Grange, who served two hundred guests a dinner featuring Black Angus beef donated by the mayor. After the speeches, Ernie Strine's Orchestra struck up its first notes, and the dance floor stayed busy well into the night.

Victory Grange also contributed to the cultural life of the region. In 1943, it won the annual Elitch Gardens trophy for the best play presented by a Colorado Grange, performing a spirited one-act comedy titled

The Gallopin' Ghost.

As Aurora expanded eastward, Victory Grange remained a steady presence—a living link between the area's agricultural roots and its suburban future. From dinner dances to banquets, from wartime plays to planning the future of local farming, Victory Grange has provided a focus for our community. Victory Grange is a Cultural Heritage site.

Aurora Historical Society 27 January meeting
Aurora's Science Fiction Land
6:00pm at the Aurora History Museum

Our speaker for the evening is

Keith Outcalt

Keith Outcalt's topic for the evening is titled "Welcome To Aurora's Science Fiction Land." Science Fiction Land was a massive, ambitious but ultimately failed 1979 plan for a huge, Disney-like sci-fi theme park in Aurora, Colorado located on Land south of I-70, conceived by producer Barry Ira Geller, featuring art by comic legend Jack Kirby, which collapsed due to fraud and scandal, but ironically became the basis for the CIA's fake movie operation in Iran, as depicted in the movie Argo.

Keith Outcalt is the education curator with the Aurora History Museum and Historic Sites. You may recognize Keith as the one who facilitates many of the events at the museum and historic sites. Keith's favorite part about working at the Aurora History Museum is "the moment when a visitor to the museum or historic site realizes that they actually do like history. But, the people I work with are pretty great, too." When asked what his favorite piece of Aurora trivia is, Keith answered, "Before the army owned Fitzsimmons, that land was Gulithiel Gardens, a nursery for trees that still grow all around the Denver area. In fact, General's Park on the Southwest side of Anschutz Medical Campus and the nearby gates seem to be a nod to the entryway for the gardens." Having lived in Colorado since 4th grade, Keith loves showing the historic sites of the Denver area.

At Our Last Meeting

🎤 Program Spotlight

Rick Crandall's topic for the evening was titled "The Colorado Freedom Memorial." The Colorado Freedom Memorial is located in Aurora, Colorado, near Buckley Air Force Base. Constructed of glass panels that reflect Colorado's mountains and blue skies, the Memorial holds the names of over 6,000 Coloradans killed or missing in action. They are grouped by war, but the names will not be alphabetized. Much of the Colorado Freedom Memorial is meant to reflect the chaos of war, including the shuffling of names.

Remembering Aurora

Michael Lockwood, Aurora Historical Society

An Aurora native, a graduate of the Aurora Public Schools (Vaughn Elementary, North Middle School & Aurora Central High School), Aurora has been a big part of my life ever since I was born. Having grown up here, I have several memories that I'd love to provide for your reading pleasure via The Advocate newsletter. For those of you who have Aurora connections that go back as far as the 1950's the recollections presented may bring back waves of nostalgia. And while I have 60 years of memories to relate, if you have some stories you'd like to share, please feel free to contact us at the Aurora Historical web site: www.auroracohistoricalsociety.org

REMEMBERING: Transitioning from North Junior High to Aurora Central High School

Moving from Vaughn Elementary to North Junior High seemed like the most exciting thing that could happen to a 12 year-old boy. You got to move between classrooms and there were many different teachers not just the one you had for an entire school year.

But the transition from North to Aurora Central was more of a terrifying ordeal. The high school kids seemed much older and more like adults. Some of the friends that had been at the Junior High level were going to another high school and making new friends at 15 can be difficult for a shy kid. There was a slight realization that the school years were drawing to a close and play time was over.

Expectations suddenly seemed high. Fitting in somehow seemed very, very important. The high school classes also seemed to be much harder (they actually were) and a little intimidating.

The funny thing is, that transition time actually prepared me for the transitions that were waiting for me for my entire life. Changing jobs, going from being single to being married, moving to a new home, from being a teenager to becoming an adult.

Time waits for no man and our history will eventually become shared memories of people and places. Preservation can help keep those memories a little more tangible so that it, too, can be shared with future generations.

Changes at Aurora History Museum in 2026

by: T. Scott Williams, Director, Aurora History Museum & Historic Sites

This past year, the AHMHS Team has served and engaged the entire community by interpreting and fostering pride in Aurora's story every day through exhibits, events, and educational programming for all ages. We have strived to find new ways for museum and historic site supporters like you to participate in our programs and increase your knowledge about Aurora's people, places, and things!

The primary purpose of this message is to inform you of changes to AHMHS operations beginning next year. The Museum is introducing modest admission fees ($5 for adults and $1 for children) and adjusting public hours (Open Days: Tuesday through Thursday 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.) in 2026, in response to the city of Aurora's budget shortfall.

The updates will allow the museum to continue delivering the exceptional experiences, community events, and innovative storytelling that have made it a cultural cornerstone in Aurora, while maintaining accessibility through affordable pricing, annual memberships, and multiple free community days each year.

The AHMHS will offer three tiers of Annual Museum Memberships, including: Individual - $25, Family - $50, and Organizational Membership - $100. For more specific information about admissions and annual membership benefits, please visit our website at AuroraMuseum.org. The new admissions, hours, and annual memberships will begin on Tuesday, Jan. 6, 2026.

On behalf of the entire Museum & Historic Sites team, I thank you for your past support, and I humbly ask for your continued support as we change our business model in 2026. I hope to see you at the museum. Please join us in preserving Aurora's history!

Aurora's Historic Photos

Photos have a way of connecting the current generation with their past. This exhibit showcases a small sample of the over 30,000 images archived at the Aurora History Museum.

On Display in the Theater Room Trolley Trailer #610

This exhibit takes a deep dive into the history of electric streetcars in the Denver metro area and explores the story of Aurora's Landmark, Trolley Trailer #610, before it was an exhibit at the Aurora History Museum.

This exhibit was chosen to return to our museum by visitors in June and July 2023.

Growing Home & Trolley Trailer No. 610

Growing Home is a permanent exhibit about Aurora's history featuring Trolley Trailer No. 610, a fully-restored 1913 historic trolley trailer. The exhibit highlights people, places, and events from Aurora's history. It features over 100 historic photographs and objects, and the fully restored 1913 historic Trolley Trailer No. 610 in the new Ruth Fountain gallery. Go inside the trolley and experience 100 years of history first-hand. The exhibit was designed by Dennis Meyer of Filament Design/Build with support from museum staff.

In October 2012, the Aurora City Council approved funding for the construction of a new gallery and addition at the Aurora History Museum. Council resolved to name it in honor of Ruth Fountain, a former city councilwoman, community activist and museum supporter.

The Aurora Museum Foundation was instrumental in raising funds and in-kind donations through grants and support from local businesses, organizations, and individuals. The 1,630 square foot gallery was completed in November 2014. The addition was designed by Humphries Poli Architects and built by Palace Construction
